Commissioner Tim Echols founded the Roadshow and his efforts have helped to expand public awareness for clean fuels across Georgia. Since its founding in 2011 the show has grown to 7 states and 48 cities across the Southeast and Mid-Atlantic. With the mission of networking fleet managers and sharing the experiences of using propane, natural gas, bio-fuels and electric vehicles, the Roadshow is helping to transform today's energy infrastructure and transportation. The Roadshow is presented in alliance with the Department of Energy's Clean Cities program.

"Helping ratepayers and businesses save money has been a hallmark of my tenure, and the Roadshow provides great information for both," said Echols. "Whether it's electric cars using home-grown power, or vehicles that can take advantage of our domestic and low cost natural gas, propane and biofuels, the Roadshow explains the benefits of making the switch to a cleaner fuel that has less price volatility."

Admission to the event is free for public officials, government staff and private fleet operators or $29 for the general public and $15 for students. Info and Registration: www.AFVRoadshow.com
